1. The new food market in Bucharest was well on its way toward becoming a reality when I left Rumania . It was located at Obor in the northeast part of the city. When completed it was to handle all the food which came to Bucharest for distribution. At the time I left  the steel framework was finished. I am sure that the Communists have completed the project because such a centralized plant would enable them to have a greater control over the populace. However, in time of war, bomb damage to the food market would disrupt the food supply of the whole city.
2. The building is a huge one, approximately four hundred yards long.

3. Available for inspection and selection at the Graphics Register is a photograph of the architect's model of the food market. This photograph clarifies the sketch above.
